

COVID-19: Effects on the Restaurant Industry

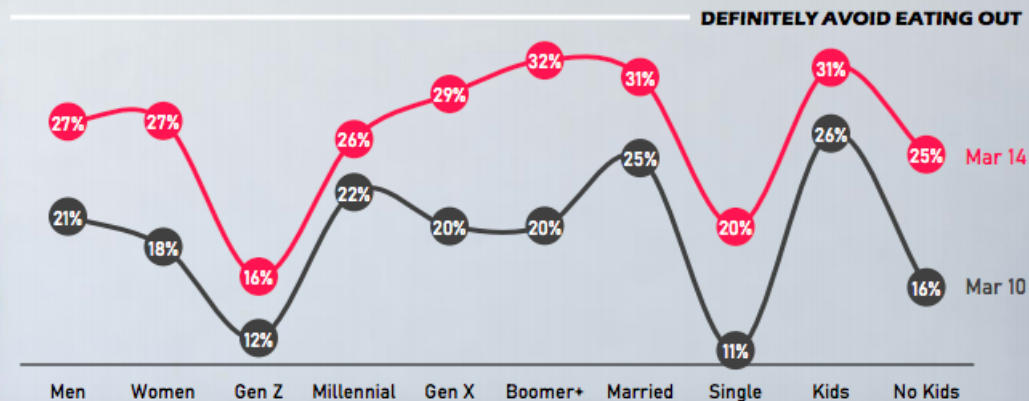

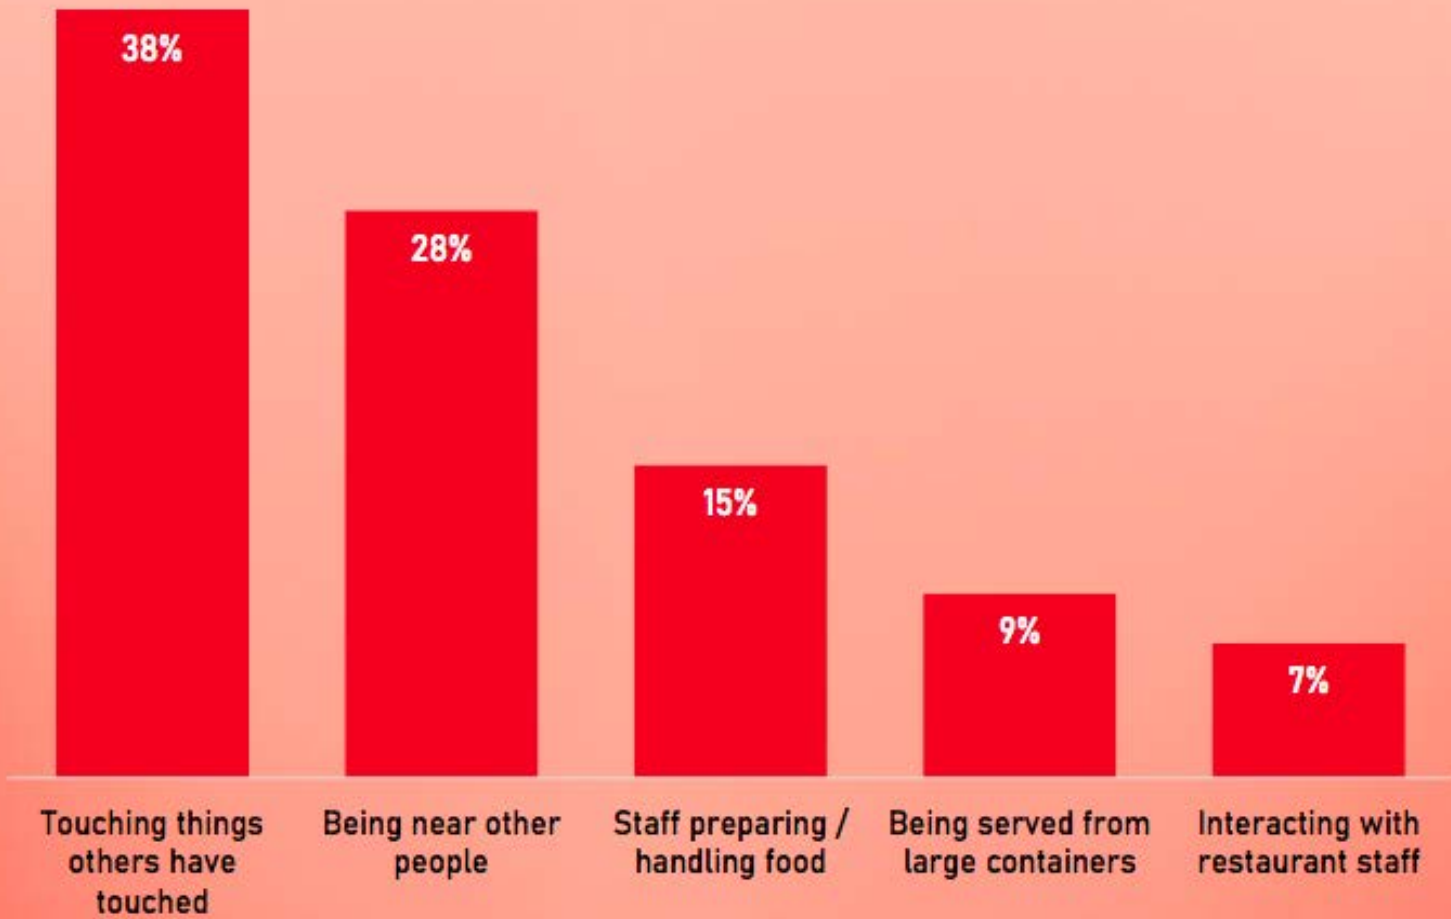

Source: Womply

Two-thirds are concerned about eating at restaurants.

A clear majority of Americans today have grown fearful of restaurants, and 27% now definitely avoid eating out entirely, a jump of 8% in just 4 days. The increased fear persists across demographic groups, with particularly large spikes among Boomers (+12%) and Gen X (+9%).

Moreover, the concern has now spilled over beyond just parents; restaurant avoidance has now spiked aggressively among single adults and those without kids. Consumers feel it's not just about protecting your family anymore — it's also about protecting yourself.
